A Legacy Continues...

Francis H. I'i Brown was a gifted statesman and leading Hawaiian figure in the 20th century. One of the most internationally known Hawaiian athletes in the 1920s, he set golf records, was a powerful swimmer and diver, a net fisherman, surfer and polo player. Francis also served in the military, was awarded the Croix de Guerre for his gallantry, served two years in the Territorial House of Representatives, and 20 years in the Senate.

Often referred to as the "last ali'i," Francis I'i Brown was the grandson of John Papa I'i, son of a chief in Kona. At age 10, John joined the royal court and became a trusted friend of the future Kamehameha II. Under the rule of Kamehameha III, John was appointed to the House of Nobles and the Privy Council and served as an associate justice of the Superior Court.

Kalahuiipua'a, now known as Mauna Lani, was a special retreat for Francis – a special place where he could "be Hawaiian." He loved to tend to the natural fishponds, raise animals, fish and entertain – living a value referred to as ho'okipa (hospitality).

Francis' vision for Mauna Lani Resort continues today. The Fairmont Orchid is a place where people can enjoy true Hawaiian hospitality and the unspoiled beauty of the island.
